How to Use Task Cards

There are several ways these task cards can be implemented and used in your class:

- Use the task cards to guide discussions in small groups of students.
- Partner students up to read and discuss each task card.
 - Use specific cards to guide class discussions or for morning meetings. Give time for students to chat with a partner first, then allow partners to share out what they think.
- Partner or group students up at tables. Pass out different cards to each group. Give students time to discuss and agree on a solution. After students are done, have each group share out and discuss what they learned from the card.

Your best friend has a new toy that you really like. You ask to see it and they say no.

What do you do?

You see your friend whispering to someone else and looking at you. When you come over, they stop talking.

What do you do?

Your brother or sister borrowed something important from you and hasn't given it back.

What do you do?

You asked your parents if you could have a friend over this weekend and they said no. Now, you are mad.
