

Puppyana Bones

by Bette Lang

Once upon a time there was a dog. She was a treasure hunter! And one day she came across a stink bug. “Well hello,” said the pungent bug. “P.U.!” the dog said, “You smell like B.O.!” So the stink bug set a spell on the dog.

Even though Queen Stinky set the spell, she mispronounced the spell which meant it was a truth spell! So, now the dog always expressed her feelings. While Queen Stinky was planning her plan, she thought the spell worked.

The world explorer dog set out to find treasure. She met a rare pugindoodle. “Hey!” said the pugindoodle, “I know you!” “You do?” Puppyana said, confused. They started talking and blabbering all day long. Then, Puppyana remembers and says, “Oh, you were the new little dog at puppy school.”

“Now that the story is out....I’m Barbara! Nice to meet you,” the spazzy dog yelled. While scared out of her shorts (or fur), she smiled, “I’m Puppyana. Nice to meet you too.”

When Puppyana said the word meet in “It’s nice to meet you”, she realized she was hungry. So, she and Barbara ate a random chicken that was crossing the road.

Then, Puppyana moved on with her quest. She knew the perilous dangers ahead.

She met ANOTHER DOG! “My mommy and daddy are gone!” the dog said bursting into tears, “And nobody wants me! This crown is all I have left.”

Now Puppuna felt sad. Then she said, “Well, you can live with me. What is your name?” “Tiny,” she said, “Tiny is my name.” The little poodle cried and cried. Soon, Puppyana was crying too.

The two dogs slept together that night in a cave and formed a bond. While sleeping, they heard a gobble and then a honk. “Yay, dinner and dessert,” Tiny said, “I’ll get it!”

So, she went to find the gobbling creature. It was a turkey. It was also Thanksgiving, but native turkeys beat her to him.

After that, they found a temple and went inside to see if there was any treasure.

Ninjas! Cowboys! The two combined! They fought and fought. Puppyana and Tiny finally beat the ninja cowboy dog, got the treasure and left.

They opened the treasure box and it was full of eggs, tons and tons of STINK BUG EGGS!

They found the stink bug and confronted her. Her punishment was being eaten!

Some people say Queen Stinky is still plotting evil plans in Puppyana's stomach!

Puppyanna Bones

written and illustrated by Bette Lang

Brandenburg Primary School
STLP 2019-2020

Created in Google Slides