Home Health vs. In Home Care

The distinctions between Home Health Care and Non-Medical In-Home Care are important for patients and their families to understand. The following information is provided to help educate consumers and caregivers about the costs and benefits of each. Home Health Care is usually covered by Medicare or insurance plans whereas Non-Medical In-Home Care is usually not. In order to be eligible for home health care coverage:

- □ Patient must be homebound
- □ Care must be ordered by a physician

□ Care must be provided by a state-licensed, Medicare-certified agency providing skilled nursing, physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech therapy, social and nutritional services.

Home Health Care has two main components. The first is comprehensive medical assessments and treatments, including effective symptom control, in order to reach immediate and short-term clinical goals after an illness, hospitalization or surgery. The second is the education and training that allows patients to integrate new self-management skills into their daily lifestyle. Both are important in the recovery process and future health of the patient.

Non-Medical In-Home Care includes personal care, homemaker, and companionship services. These services do not require a physician's order. It is paid for by Long Term Care policies, Private Pay, Medicaid Waiver programs, Veteran Affairs programs, Options programs and Workers' Compensation.
