

Plantation Sweets Cobbtown, Georgia

Plantation Sweets is a family owned farming, packing and shipping corporation. It originated from land and tradition from the Allen Collins genealogy. Ronny Collins, great grandson of Allen Collins, is the present CEO.

Plantation Sweets is located in the picturesque farmlands of Southern Georgia. Plantation Sweets produces the very sweetest and highest quality Vidalia Onion by utilizing cultural practices that have been proven for generations. Plantation Sweets also plants and grows sweet corn, sweet potatoes and watermelons, saying that the sweet soil the Vidalia Onions grow in also makes the other produce sweeter. They grow over 500 acres of sweet potatoes alone.

Plantation Sweets has also partnered with the The National Childrens' Cancer Society in a new cause "Produce for Cancer". The goal is to communicate the importance of good nutrition for a healthy lifestyle while supporting children with cancer and their families. "Good nutrition can improve your health and make you feel better, plus it can add years to your life."

"Our focus on food safety, product traceability, high graphic packaging, and green initiatives is implemented into Plantation Sweets operations to exceed industry standards."

The Collins family takes great pride in continuing a family tradition that began more than 50 years ago, and we thank you, our customers, for helping us to keep this tradition alive.

The sweet potato is a Power House of Nutrition. They have anti-inflammatory properties, are loaded with fiber, Vitamin C, potassium, beta-carotene and are low in fat, sodium and cholesterol. They have a wonderful taste and can be cooked any number of different ways, stewed, boiled, baked, fried and more.
