

Crestola Farms

Crestola Farms, a 1,650 acre farm with 200 traditional row crops, is located near Albany, Georgia. Owners Phil Hajek and Alex Harrell began their farming ventures in 1994 offering a wide variety of fruits, vegetables, grains and other crops, including corn, soybeans, sorghum, sunflowers, wheat, mushrooms, tomatoes, peppers, squash, cucumbers, okra, and watermelon.

Many of the acres that Crestola Farms owns are for growing pine trees and pine straw.

Crestola Farms is currently working toward obtaining certifications, preparing to grow organic crops, and packaging for their many fruits, grains, and vegetables. Their sustainable agriculture practices include cover crops, drip irrigation, and using limited pesticides.

Crestola Farms was chosen as "Farm of the Year" by Progressive Farmer Upland Game Management, in 1997.
