- Wyoming Area has been awarded a $5,000 Seed to Change Grant to help promote a school garden. Seed Change is an 18-month, $1.5 million project funded by the Walmart Foundation addressing barriers to farm to school in states that are ripe for significant growth. The mini grants will support a wide variety of activities including local food student tastings and school garden activities.

The garden is located on a plot of land outside the library, which was started with the help of a local greenhouse owner, James and Marion Chiampi, who generously donated some tomato, pepper and onion plants. A club has been formed at Wyoming Area of students who are interested in the gardening aspect of the project as well as the ecological aspect. Mr. Dennis Hando is club moderator. The grant was written by Charlene Berti, Dennis Hando and Melissa Collevchio.

We are excited to be on the cutting edge in creating and promoting a farm to school network here at Wyoming Area.
