

13. How can the school and the district build staff and parent capacity (knowledge and skills) for strong parent involvement to ensure that parents have the tools that they need to participate fully in decisions regarding their children's education?
- To make sure teachers tell the parent in what the child is struggling.
  - They are doing a great job!
  - Keep doing what you are doing.
  - Perhaps having a parent resource center in each school that lends material.
  - Listen to your students and parents do what they say.
  - I think this question is poorly written, I understand it but I think most parents will ignore it due to the questions lack of clarity. I think this question embodies the problem. When you approach a Title I parent maybe dial back the elitism. That would likely foster a relationship where parents felt more comfortable participating in decisions regarding their children's education.
  - Keep girls and boys apart.
  - Everything is good
  - Always attend to meet and anything that has to do with students.
  - Translate in both languages
  - They are doing a great job
14. How can the school and district involve parents in the development and implementation of effective Parent Involvement Policies and School Improvement Plans?
- Listen
  - Parent/Teacher conference
  - By ensuring that all parents are given the opportunity to be part plan
  - SAC Committee does this- use them effectively
  - By listening more.
  - No need everything is good
  - Everything is good.
  - They are doing a great job
15. What suggestions would you have for improving parent involvement activities at this school?
- Let parents come at anytime during lunch and activities with child.
  - I don't have any.
  - Communication with grades and remediation.
  - Technology Text, broadcast meetings on a school district site.
  - WES has good involvement from parents.
  - Make time where people can get away.
  - More school activities
  - The parents should always be involved in the child activities.
  - To do them later during the day
16. Comments:
- Parents should have more involvement with activities at school with the child and should be aloud to go eat with the students to surprise them. Other than having to make a schedule appointment and pants should be able to volunteer without having to have a drivers licenses. I would love to be able to be involved with my child and the activities and help with her.

- WES is outstanding (Humble school)
- I am grateful for my daughters teacher this year.
- If your not bleeding or dying then do not tell me, it doesn't matter, unless it is an absolute emergency. Not a good way to teach our children.
- We had a couple of incidents with the assistant principal when she gave us an attitude of a racism to Hispanics and zero communication from her to us on three different issues.
- I would like a parent guide on who to help with common core math. I did not learn this therefore it is difficult for me to help my child.
